A STARMAN ATTRACTION

★ DAVID Bowie's childhood home is to become a tourist attraction. Heritage of London Trust have acquired the two up, two down terrace cottage at 4 Plaistow Grove in Bromley where the Starman – born David Robert Jones – began his musical journey.

★ Due for completion late next year, the house will be restored to its original early 1960s appearance and create an immersive experience for fans.

It will centre on the Bowie's bedroom where he wrote his early song ideas from ages eight to 20.

★ Curator Geoffrey Marsh, inset left, announced the project yesterday with director Nicola Stacey and Bowie's lifelong pal George Underwood – who left the singer with his distinctive dilated pupil after a punch-up over a girl when they were 15.

Geoffrey said: "It was in this small house, particularly in his bedroom, that Bowie evolved from an ordinary suburban schoolboy to the beginnings of an extraordinary international stardom."
